During fall 2017 the advertising agency Deutsch sent me to take photographs on a six city tour across the country. The cities were selected to cover a wide array of the American experience, from the wealthiest county in the country to one of the poorest American cities, diverse places and not, liberal and conservative, dense urban areas and a town with one of the fastest decreasing populations in the country.

We went into the homes of teenagers, single millennials, young families and single parents. People shared their thoughts on the state of the country, culture, and their hopes and dreams (with most everyone articulating a desire for some peace of mind.)

The images were compiled into a hundred page color book and displayed in a special exhibition for Deutsch's CEO conference. What follows is a selection of images and spreads from the book.

Cities:

Jersey City, NJ

Mesa, AZ

Loudoun County, Virginia

Farmington, NM

Detroit, MI

Portland, OR
